OUR VISION

That one day every foster child in California will have access to the transformative service and support of a CASA volunteer.

OUR MISSION

California Court Appointed Special Advocates Association ensures that children and youth in the foster care system have both a voice and the services they need for a stable future.

“All kids need is a little help,
a little hope, and somebody who believes in them.”

– Earvin “Magic” Johnson

Dear Friends,

California's children and youth in foster care possess enormous potential for growth and positive change. They represent hope for the future, and they deserve our investment in them. That's why it's never too early to create a safe and nurturing home for a child, but it's never too late either. Every young person should have a chance to thrive and a second chance at healing their past traumas. As we work towards a brighter future for all children, the California CASA Association and its network of 44 local CASA programs are making sure that no child gets left behind.

While COVID-19 appeared to reduce the number of children who entered the California dependency system in 2020 (from 83,500 down to 78,989), experts are now warning that those statistics don't tell the full story. In fact, numbers may skyrocket in the post-pandemic period, as it becomes clearer how child abuse actually increased in our state during 18+ months of closed schools, uncontrolled COVID-19 infections, economic stress, unemployment, evictions, substance abuse, and shuttered communities.

Studies show that former foster children are almost twice as likely to suffer from Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) as U.S. war veterans, and the great majority of them demonstrate multiple factors identified as "Adverse Childhood Experiences" (ACEs) that have been proven to result in later trauma, poor health, and even early death. Children who spend time in the foster care system need a tremendous amount of support to overcome the odds that are stacked against them, and research confirms that just one trusted adult in a child's life can make a world of difference.

We know that a CASA volunteer's dedicated advocacy, support, and mentorship can have a lasting, far-reaching impact on a child's present and future. Studies have shown that children with a CASA volunteer on their side are more likely to find a safe, permanent home, succeed in school, and are half as likely to reenter the foster care system. In fact, CASA advocacy can completely change the trajectory of a child's life. Last year, 12,947 foster children had CASA volunteers in California. But with an estimated 46,316 children who could benefit from a CASA, so much more must be done.

There is an urgent need to lift up children who have experienced abuse or neglect and fill their future with light. And that is what drives California CASA to deliver impactful support to our network through fundraising, training, legislative advocacy, marketing, and expert counsel and advice. We know that strengthening each CASA program, raising awareness in their communities, and creating connections to bring together our state's CASA staff and volunteers will result in more direct services for the children and youth who need them most.

It is thanks to you and your generosity that we can work towards this vision for a brighter future for our children, and we are so deeply grateful for all that you do.

Thank you!

SHINING A LIGHT

...ON COURT APPOINTED SPECIAL ADVOCATES (CASAs)

A Court Appointed Special Advocate is a volunteer who dedicates between 10-12 hours a month to help children who have experienced abuse or neglect: one caring adult, assigned to the same child, while they're in the foster care system even if caregivers, schools, and other situations change. CASA volunteers work together with a child's family of origin, foster family, social workers, attorneys, and CASA staff to build a long-term support network. They help kids plan for a future that's brighter than their past.

COURT APPOINTED SPECIAL ADVOCATES:

Can be appointed by a judge in a local court to advocate for a child and their family.

Bring a unique level of dedication to children, families, and communities.

Are well trained and supervised by professionals at local non-profit CASA programs.

Recognize that permanency is essential to a child's well-being.

Keep children connected to their cultural identity and family of origin.

CASA VOLUNTEERS:

and well-being of the child, now and

BUILDING A BRIGHTER FUTURE

The California CASA Association connects all the state's 44 local CASA programs, raises awareness for the need for CASA volunteers, and promotes legislation that benefits children in foster care.

CASA volunteers are assigned by judges to work on behalf of youth who have experienced abuse or neglect. CASA programs in counties throughout California recruit and train volunteers to make sure children in foster care get the support and services they need and deserve.

HEALING THE PAST FOR A BRIGHTER FUTURE

TURNING TRAUMA INTO RESILIENCY

In an ideal world, a child would never experience abuse or neglect. The reality is that each year, thousands of children are removed from dangerous home environments and placed in a well-intentioned but overwhelmed system. In 2020, the global Coronavirus pandemic complicated and worsened conditions for the most vulnerable youth in our state. Children who had a CASA volunteer, however, were able to stay connected to one reliable advocate through it all, and this might have made all the difference. A CASA recognizes that permanency, both legal and relational, is essential to a child's well-being. They work to keep young people connected to their cultural identity, siblings, and extended family to form a long-term support network that will be there through the good times and bad, until it's safe to live with their family of origin again. When these efforts are multiplied to support foster youth in every county, it can have a profound beneficial effect on communities.

California Surgeon General Dr. Nadine Burke Harris has spent her career studying childhood trauma, toxic stress, and the profound impact on public health. "It just takes one stable relationship with a caring adult to help reverse the negative impacts on a child who has experienced abuse or neglect," she has stated. "Many children have been placed in the foster care system because of abuse or neglect, causing both physical and emotional pain. These Adverse Childhood Experiences, or ACEs, can also lead to lifelong health problems. But ACEs are not destiny. Studies have shown that just one supportive adult in the life of a child can reverse some of the negative impacts of ACEs. A Court Appointed Special Advocate, or CASA, can help a child who has experienced abuse and neglect begin to heal from their past, and build a healthier future."

87% of children in California's foster care system were removed from their families due to neglect.

Neglect is frequently defined as the failure of a parent or other person with responsibility for the child to provide needed food, clothing, shelter, medical care, or supervision to the degree that the child's health, safety, and well-being are threatened with harm.

“I can be changed by what happens to me, but I refuse to be reduced by it.”

- Maya Angelou

SPOTLIGHT ON DISPROPORTIONALITY IN CALIFORNIA

In 2018, Black/African American youth were overrepresented in foster care statewide at a rate of 4 times their share of the general population. California CASA is working to increase the diversity of CASA staff members, board members, and volunteers so that CASA better reflects the racial and other identities of the children served by advocates. Additionally, California CASA is increasing recruitment of bilingual volunteers in order to meet the needs of Hispanic/Latinx youth who represent half of all children in California's foster care system.

SHINING A LIGHT ON LGBTQ+ FOSTER YOUTH IN CALIFORNIA

Even under ideal circumstances, the child welfare system can provide complex challenges for children and especially for LGBTQ+ youth. Like all young people in this system, they must cope with the abuse and neglect they may have suffered at the hands of their families or caregivers. But LGBTQ+ youth are also at higher risk of additional harms, including discrimination, institutionalization, and even abuse within the foster care system.

CALIFORNIA CASA:

WE CONNECT the 44 CASA programs across California and provide support, advice, resources, training, opportunities for collaboration, and guidance to maintain a high-quality network that serves children's best interests.

WE ADVOCATE for legislation and funding that benefits children in foster care and the CASA volunteers who work on their behalf.

WE RAISE AWARENESS of issues faced by current and former foster youth as well as youth in the juvenile justice system, the benefits provided by the powerful advocacy of CASA volunteers, and the need for more advocates across the state.

A GUIDING LIGHT THROUGHOUT CALIFORNIA

We are proud to support and strengthen CASA programs so they can provide direct services to children who have experienced abuse and neglect and recruit more volunteer advocates for youth in foster care through:

TRAINING

Our program ranges from a multi-day leadership “boot-camp” for Executive Directors filled with courses on fundraising, human resources, dependency law, and networking opportunities to webinars and in-person classes with expert lecturers and child-welfare specialists for CASA staff and volunteers.

ADVOCACY

We provide leadership at the state level communicating the CASA mission and message and use our collective voice to speak up for policies and legislation that will benefit children and youth in the foster care system.

SUPPORT

We identify funding and partnership opportunities to meet the needs and goals of local CASA programs so they can recruit more volunteer advocates, increase awareness in their communities, and help more children who have experienced abuse and neglect build a brighter future.

CONNECTION

We bring together CASA leadership, staff, and volunteers through multiple communication tools and regular in-person and online gatherings. As a central contact point for 44 CASA programs, we ensure the collective tools and knowledge of our network are shared throughout the state.

AWARENESS

We raise the visibility of the CASA mission and the needs of youth and children in foster care through large-scale, statewide marketing campaigns, public service announcements, public relations, and strategic partnerships.

50% Foster children who are assigned a CASA are 50% less likely to re-enter the foster care system.

PROVIDING A SPARK TO LOCAL CASA PROGRAMS & STAFF

KERN

“The individualized support we received from California CASA staff has been instrumental in overcoming some of the most pressing challenges non-profit leaders face. The facilitated monthly marketing meetings have given us invaluable fundraising ideas and tips on social media and marketing. Just being able to discuss successes and challenges with other programs has been so beneficial. Additionally, continuing education and training opportunities for staff and volunteers are easily accessible and have helped us stay at the forefront of child advocacy in our community.”

—AMY TRAVIS, Executive Director, CASA of Kern County

MONTEREY

“Without exception, the expertise and collaborative approach of the staff at California CASA have been instrumental to the success of our program during a complicated year. All of us at CASA of Monterey County have benefited from the leadership, technical assistance and support, program knowledge, fundraising and marketing tools, and patient and informed financial advice. We are more grateful than I can say for their partnership.”

—BETH WILBUR, Executive Director,
CASA of Monterey County

SAN FRANCISCO

“California CASA raised awareness about our program through the New York Times annual Holiday Impact Prize Column. This not only caused our December 2020 website visits to increase 54% from the previous December, but also led to record enrollment in our training class for new volunteers in January 2021. Our December donations were also double what we received in the previous year, and we increased the amount of youth served by advocates in our county by almost 20%.”

—PAUL KNUDSEN, Director, Development and Communications, San Francisco CASA

RIVERSIDE

“Sometimes, I hear other nonprofit leaders say how lonely their roles can be. California CASA provides resources and facilitates collaboration for the state’s local CASA programs so that their leaders, staff, volunteers, and board members have access to mission-specific support that is unique in the social sector.”

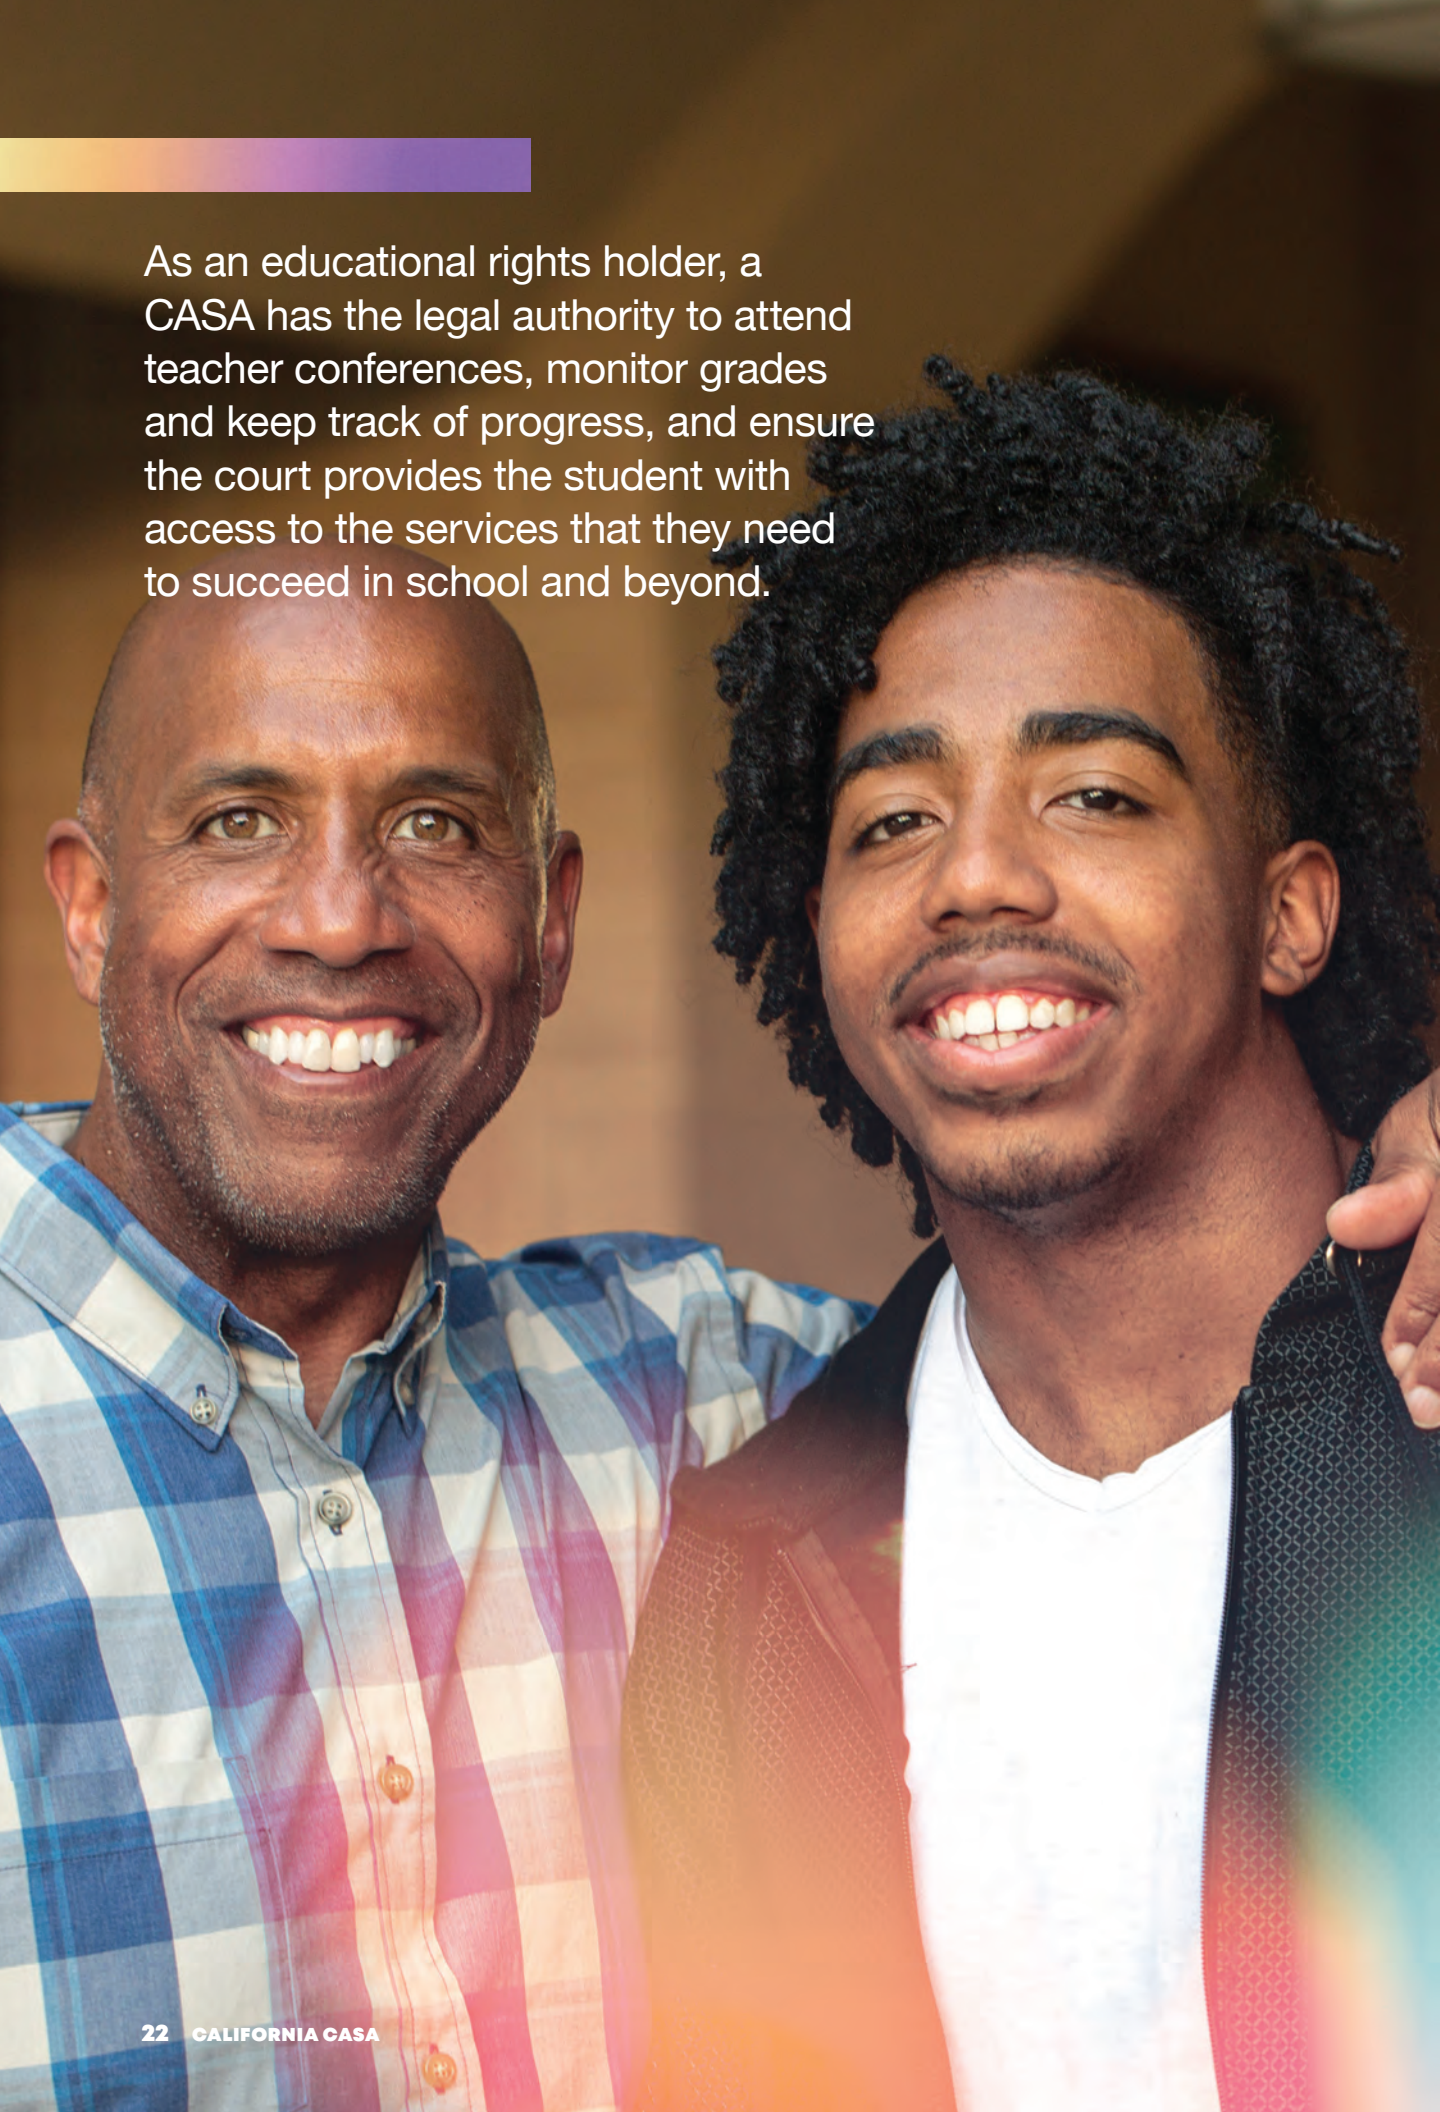

—JESSICA MUÑOZ, ESQ., MFS, Executive Director, Voices for Children, Riverside

SACRAMENTO

“The California CASA team has helped us engage a broader base of the community through leadership tools, expert advice, and marketing and outreach campaigns on television and on the radio in our region. We are seeing an increased volunteer interest and greater awareness of our program and the impact it has on children in the foster care system.”

—CAROL NOREEN, JD, Executive Director, CASA of Sacramento County

As an educational rights holder, a CASA has the legal authority to attend teacher conferences, monitor grades and keep track of progress, and ensure the court provides the student with access to the services that they need to succeed in school and beyond.

LIFTING UP YOUTH FOR A BRIGHTER FUTURE

ONE CHILD AT A TIME

For a child, a CASA represents a stable, trusted relationship with an adult, something that studies have shown will create long-term benefits, even when that child has faced significant hardships. By consistently being “the voice” for foster children in court, the classroom, and the community, these well-trained and closely supervised CASAs help to mitigate the trauma of abuse and the unintended negative impacts of foster care.

Experts agree that children do best when they can safely remain with their parents or with other family members. CASA volunteers work with specialists and service providers to identify and make recommendations aimed at keeping families intact or returning children safely to family members or other relatives. When that is not possible, advocates work to help the child reach another safe and stable forever home.

As trusted adult mentors in their lives, they help children find their own special talents like music or sports and can ask the court to ensure they can take part in extracurricular activities. In fact, youth with a CASA volunteer are more likely to participate in hobbies, be enrolled in an appropriate educational setting, graduate from high school on time, and attend college or vocational school. Transition age youth who remain in the foster care system as legal adults are more likely to access services and support if they are assigned a CASA and more likely to remain financially independent and housed.

Testimonial evidence from former foster youth themselves speaks to the most powerful impact of a CASA; a sense of well-being and belonging, and a feeling that someone cared about them when they felt the most alone in the world. In addition to the basic needs of food, clothing and shelter, all children deserve to feel loved and accepted and that they have a bright future in front of them. California CASA, together with local CASA program staff and volunteers, are working to lift up youth across the state and fill their future, and the communities they live in, with light.

FINANCIAL SUMMARY

This past year challenged California CASA and our state network as never before, as we lived through the COVID-19 pandemic that swept across the state and nation, shut down communities, and caused grief, pain, and economic paralysis up and down California. It was especially hard for our 44 CASA programs, their volunteers, and the foster children they serve. California CASA pivoted to focus considerable energies to ensure that the local programs could continue to support their volunteers and children. We worked to conserve resources, operate efficiently, and find needed support for the local CASA programs. We ended the fiscal year with a surplus, which contributes to our own sustainability plan for the future.

California CASA, a private, nonprofit organization, is working hard throughout the state so that one day we can serve every child in our foster care system who needs a CASA.

Together, we can achieve this goal.

Financial contributions to California CASA ensure local programs get the necessary training and support to recruit CASA volunteers and match them with abused and neglected children in need as well as provide a voice for those children at the California state legislature and beyond.
